

AMERICAN CORPORATE SLOGANS YOU'LL NEVER SEE

Apple Computer: Unafraid of the Pit at Its Core.

Coca-Cola: Pleasantly Poisoning The World, One Smile at a Time.

Jim Beam: Offering Great Spirits (Until Thy Cup Runneth Dry)

KFC: Ripping You Off, Bite by Greasy Bite.

Lockheed: Cocking Up Your Future!

Mastercard: Masterfully Managing Mamon.

Merk: Pumping Out More Pills Than You'll Ever Need.

McDonalds: Mass-Marketing Death Between Each Bun.

Monsanto: Mutating Life, Monetizing Extinction.

Walmart: Rock-Bottom Prices with Sky-High Irresponsibility, Every Aisle, Every Day!

Sam: (raising his eyebrows) Why rant against corporations? Isn't this just noise— another angry list?

Tim: Because at this point in history, the biggest criminals on this planet aren't individuals, but organizations. They now have more rights than private individuals and far less accountability.

Kris: (impertinently) Well, why aren't more of them on the FBI's "Most Wanted List"?

Terri: (laughing sardonically) Well . . . Maybe the FBI itself is a criminal organization? It certainly is not immune to political pressure. Power rarely get investigated without permission by a higher power.

Tim: (launching into a boring rant) It seems most corporations are so obsessed with short-term profit that they are oblivious to the long-term harm they are causing on people, ecosystems, and the future of our planet itself.

Terri: (pausing, sipping her coffee) I think several major offenders are not listed here.

Tim: Of course not. The most skilled criminal organizations don't show up on radar screens. They own them.
