

SONG CELESTE:

Some thoughts about harsh realities and celestial myths

Ron : Sometimes it seems as if reality is often unpalatable for humans. To soften harsh truths, we invent myths. Some myths formalize into religions; others become cultural debris.

Linda : (nodding) The myths that we weave also weave us. Cause and effect intertwine.

Lex : (chuckling at the absurdity) No cause. No effect. Just flow and emptiness.

Lis : Take this image for example. It seems to depict angels. But do such beings really exist?

Lex : We invent all sorts of imaginary things. Humans have a capacity to love. At that moment don't we become angelic?
